LUMBER TOMORROW MEANS LUMBER TODAY!

Jacksonville, FL– April 2006: Working with Lumber Products has become an increasingly active niche market for Amware’s Jacksonville, FL facility. Between preparations for late-summer weather disasters, and the inevitable aftermath cleanup, more and more lumber suppliers are keeping stock in Northern Florida.

“It used to be that importers speculated on the wood market and stocked-up when they could”, says Rob Doyle, Vice President of Amware Logistics. “Nowadays, suppliers are speculating on clean-up efforts and spending more energy modeling demand than time concentrating on procurement. Fact is, our society is as dependent on lumber as we are on combustible fuels. This is not a trend; it’s a commodity market we cannot live without and suppliers are stocking-up in the wake of 2005’s disaster season.”

Amware Logistics is well positioned to manage deconsolidation of lumber shipments in North Florida and our Craftsmen have been honing their skills alongside the spike in demand for our services. Today, our Craftsmen are some of the most skilled and knowledgeable handlers of lumber products in the market. Each day they manage deliveries by Container, Flatbed, and Rail. “Our newest Customers are realizing years of service benefit as our Craftsmen have already weathered the learning curve and are now here to provide exceptional service along expedited timelines”, offers Neil Porter, Amware’s Jacksonville General Manager. “Be it for new construction, disaster relief, or regular retail replenishment, we have the knowledgeable staff and customer service focus to expedite lead-times and provide product placement when and where your customers demand.”
